

David Metcalff

An exhibition of works by Dorset wire sculptor, David Metcalff

David has been a self-employed artist for a number of years and his work can be found in galleries nationwide. Although originally trained in ceramics, David has been inspired by his interest in garden design and wildlife to work with galvanised woven wire to produce animal and bird sculptures of varying sizes. These include owls mounted on blocks of wood, hares captured mid-leap and wandering pheasants. The sculptures are suitable for display in the garden all year round, where the silvery grey colour of the wire softens the lines of the finished pieces and is contrasted naturally by foliage.

David makes his sculptures by stitching together layers of wire, sometimes around a hollow core or frame. His most recent work plays with scale in the form of giant seed pods and fruit.
